A Performing Licence must be granted before any performance can be given. It is an infringement of Copyright Law to give any performance or public reading of a play before the fee has been paid and the licence issued. Please note that agents are employed to monitor and report press and internet notices and reviews of amateur productions of plays in which the author has Copyright. Richard Lloyd Playscripts impose no restriction on the video recording of performances where this is undertaken in order to provide a record of the production for participants. For professional performances, and halls seating more than 300, fees are subject to negotiation.
